Planehook Aviation Services, LLC

Planehook Aviation Services first opened its doors on December 1, 2004. Since its inception, Planehook has stayed true to its mission: developing and implementing low-cost, effective security solutions to protect the General Aviation Community against terrorists and other criminal elements. Our client base includes airports, corporations and various government agencies. In addition, as a public service Planehook launched a free monthly webcast program to provide some of its numerous low-cost solutions to interested listeners.

Recognizing the clear link between general aviation and the burgeoning civilian space industry, Planehook began working behind the scenes with the FAA in its development of security and training regulations for commercial spaceflight—especially space tourism. After years of providing inputs on federal regulations, Planehook took a bold step and announced that it would bring its effective security strategies and proven solutions into the civilian manned spaceflight industry. This intention was announced in early 2008 on an episode of The Space Show™ with Dr. David Livingston.

The security programs needed to fully support space tourism require experts from many different industries. Understanding this, Planehook and Farina and Associates, Ltd. formed The Space Tourism Security Alliance and are its founding members.
